remember seeing a picture of the design document for the Deadlands Noir database project back in 2009. It was part of a presentation in Dallas a few months before the 2010 GenCon game event c9d1549cdd

I am a huge fan of steampunk in general, and all steampunk firearms in particular. I'm also a big fan of the Cthulhu Mythos and the works of Lovecraft, so when I got my hands on a couple of documents which were part of the Bizarre Weapons exhibit at Dorkbot Denver's Lovecraft Hackathon, I was very excited to find out that not only did they have some really cool items from the Dark Arts Exhibition, but they were also awesome Lovecraftian weapons! The first two documents I received were: The history of the Cthulhu Class Guns By Jeet Sukumaran: It was the early 90s, and I was attending college at the University of Colorado at Boulder. I found out about a gaming and writing convention called Bronycon and had a friend of mine interested in cosplaying. I was excited to say the least and made plans with him. It was my first Bronycon. The convention center was located in the town of Boulder, Colorado. And as I headed to the convention, my car was in a ditch on the side of the street. I was stuck there for a while, but it was really no big deal. After about an hour or so, I decided to head to Bronycon. I went back to my car and went to walk to the Bronycon convention, and my car was still in the same place. I called a friend of mine to go to Bronycon with me and he agreed. When we got to Bronycon, we found out my car was still in the same place. I texted another friend and he told me to stay where I was and see if he would come. I waited at the convention for about 30 more minutes and he finally showed up with an AAA tow truck. We went back to the car and, by this time, it was at the tow yard. I called a few friends to see if anyone could help and two hours later, I was back at the convention center, my car was picked up, and I was feeling good. At the end of the convention, I decided I was going to drive to my car and see how my car was doing. I got in my car, started it up, and backed it up. My car was fine, so I drove home, a little worse for wear. My friend Jeet

' Imaginary Worlds. About a month and half ago, music video director and producer Carlos Fazekas (AKA Modest Eyes) released his captivating video for his song "I Was Born to Know How to Be in Love." Today, Fazekas offers a series of narrative interpretations and a conceptual reflection on the impact this song had during his life - especially in Brazil. As he says: "I believe in the power of image, of songs, of music. They can transform reality and create inner worlds. The song 'I Was Born to Know How to Be in Love' began to dominate my life when I was 19 years old. I could even say my life turned upside down for me in a way that I will never forget." In this blog post, Modest Eyes breaks down the images and scenarios captured in the main music video for the song "I Was Born to Know How to Be in Love", offering a glimpse into his experience and the relationships that he went through. The first five interpretations of the Modest Eyes Music Video for 'I Was Born To Know How To Be In Love'. Visit CarlosFazekas.com for the full versions. 1. Free. Carlos Fazekas Music Video Overview: The first part of this interpretation or short story revolves around a young man on the rooftop of a house; an old Italian man talks to him from the bed of the bed and he takes a key from around his neck, presents it to the boy and tells him to let's free the birds. A waterfall appears and it is snowing. A girl appears, wearing a long corset and white shirt. Its tops are high; she wears black boots and has a flowered belt. She takes off her glasses and they fall in the snow and she gets up, follows the old man... Carlos Fazekas Lyrics (He created this story a few years ago.) In the right time, I was in love with a girl. I was
