What's new in Cubesis:

This week, New York's daily newspaper, the New York Daily News, published an article about the Governor's race. It didn't make for pretty reading. So I want to make this straightforward and easy to understand, as simple as I can, and hopefully clear up any fears you may have on the subject. The Daily News report aired an interview in which me and Tony were discussed. The conclusion of the News was that "Ron can't stand behind his commitment to integrity, so he must have made the Republican committee members agree he must resign." This is wrong, for multiple reasons. 1. The News knows nothing of my attempts to get my campaign endorsed by either of the two major party organizations, nor do they know of my membership in the Republican club. Therefore, they have no reason to assume that the leadership of either of those institutions were involved in any way whatsoever in my failure to be endorsed. Therefore, the report to the contrary is based upon false premises and is, therefore, a fiction. 2. Ron. Dancer, is wrong in assuming that people who are endorsed because they've done the work of voters are automatically worthy of my endorsement. We all know he practices what he preaches to others, as his job is a high-profile one for a candidate who has done next to nothing to earn an endorsement over and above being supported by the unions and party organizations.

3. The News item does not appear to have a single fact, or even based upon any facts, nor does it have any analysis. The “why” is left to its readers to assume. This begs the question: what one cares about, really? Here, I want to look at the core of the issue, and maybe, even help to clarify the portrayal made in the editorial, as well as of all the other coverage, at the time of the controversy. It’s a much broader picture than what some might think. Let’s take it step by step. We’ll get to the issue of the specific problems involved. Let’s break this down to the least political part first. Go ahead and start a brand new thread in the Free Fred basis of the project. I want to start with a post by Threaded on one of the nights when the story broke. Read it. It is a very typical thread, with a

In a previous study, we reported that purine degradation pathway of Shewanella oneidensis MR-1 was carried out by two enzymes: HerA, which acts on ribose and PMP, and NarE. NarE transfers the 4-nitro-6-hydroxy muconate generated from guanine to the transglycosylase to convert it to 6-hydroxy muconic semialdehyde, which is then catabolized to 2-oxoadenine. In this study, we report that homogentisate is produced from purine and then entered the heme biosynthesis pathway. Therefore, we hypothesized that the S. oneidensis MR-1 strain possess the activities of heme biosynthetic enzymes. The homogentisate 1,2-dioxygenase and the outer membrane heme uptake system (ombABC) were cl
