No loading times and no Microtransactions. Excellent gameplay and unit upgrade system. Difficulties are adjusted to the players skill-level. Realistic collision and physics. (Liked this) Fast replays and possible to skip battles. Comprehensive and clean manual. Different map sizes and most of them are moddable. Very long campaign and good camera control Soundtrack is composed by a new, really good composer with a lot of different moods. Easily the best WW2 military strategy ever released. A-Phott Like most of its fellow, Panzer Corps 2 is a close tactical WW2 wargame. It uses the map editor in PCS2 to make the fights in the game more epic. StrategyWikiStratWiki It's my personal opinion, but PCS2 does much better than it's predecessor. Because PCS1 had a small map pool, and that it included mostly the Eastern front, it wasn't long until I found a map which I would have liked to play. PCS2 has a bigger map pool, and it has a much more diverse Eastern front than PCS1. I played my first PCS2 mission in the Middle East. It was great and I even captured the last German East African base. It was both epic and with a bit of luck, I won. Installation and gameplay is the best I've seen on the PC, with no loading times, it's very playable. (Some games, I had to sit and wait for a quarter of an hour before I could get into a battle.) Microtransactions are completely missing in PCS2. War Games and Scenarios on Mobile PlatformsDaily Combat Gaming Panzer Corps 2 HD is a great turn-based strategy game. PCS2 is based upon the best turn-based strategy game of the last generation: Panzer General. PCS2 HD is the high definition version of the strategy game and it is equipped with a stunning graphics and intuitive gameplay. Wargame WebsitesMassed Games The game is available for PC (Microsoft Windows, macOS and Linux) and, thanks to an impressive experience in performance, also for mobile devices (iOS and Android). Its price is around 40 euros. "The Best WW2 Strategy Game of the Moment"Winning Goal Panzer Corps 2 is a triumph of a sequel, they managed to improve the formula of their predecessor without losing their essence. The game

What's new in Panzer Corps 2:

Panzer Corps 2 was a corps-sized unit of the German army during World War II. It was created on 6 August 1944 in the Western Allies' final preparation for crossing the River Rhine in the Battle of the Bulge campaign. Background At the beginning of World War II, the German High Command (OKH) was concerned with the fighting that had begun in Poland. Fearing an offensive by Allied France forces, OKH decided to concentrate all available German armoured forces in the West and to make them available for action. OKH's principal commander-in-chief, Generaloberst Gerd von Rundstedt, started planning for an armoured offensive in the Ardennes in an attempt to draw away elements of the Western Allies. In October 1943, von Rundstedt launched Operation Autumn Mist, an offensive by the 1st SS Panzer Army and the 6th Army in the Ardennes, to divert Allied resources from the planned offensive in the Eastern front. Operation Blue, the main assault of the offensive, was launched on 5 January 1944. Despite the strength and skill of the attacking forces, the offensive initially yielded few gains. Heavy snow soon swamped the divisions that invaded Ardennes and inflicted heavy casualties. An SS breakout attempted in SS Panzergrenadier Division Nordland's sector was not successful, but similar attempts elsewhere were held up by the Allies. The offensive also turned the terrain into a poor defensive position for the Allies. Oberkommando der Wehrmacht (OKW) blamed the commander of Army Group B, General der Panzertruppen Hans Eberbach for the failed offensive. Eberbach had held his ground during an attempted Allied offensive at First Battle of the Bulge. Eberbach's forces halted, which led to his commanders' dismissal. Eberbach was replaced by General der Panzertruppen Maximilian von Weichs, but was replaced in turn by General der Panzertruppen Dietrich von

Choltitz. Von Choltitz had controlled Group B's forces until reinforcements from the Eastern front arrived. The lack of successes by the armoured divisions of the 1st SS Panzer Army under the command of General der Panzertruppen Sepp Dietrich led Rundstedt to split the armoured formation and to create a second armoured formation under von Choltitz. Forces drawn from the Army Groups B, B, B and B were transferred to von Choltitz's
