The present invention relates generally to a self-aligning roller bearing assembly and, in particular, to a ball bearing assembly for use in power transmissions and the like. Self-aligning ball bearings have been found to be highly desirable in many applications such as a self-aligning roller bearing assembly used in conventional transmissions. Conventional ball bearings, however, are not as desirable as self-aligning roller bearing have a large number of rolling elements. In order to have a large number of rolling elements, however, it has been determined that it is necessary that there be a large contact area between the roller cones and the inner rings of the bearing. This large contact area results in the inner ring of the bearing assembly desirable dates as balf-aligning a common axis by axially opposed and spaced journal surfaces disposed on the associated parts. In a self-aligning bearing of the type having outer races which are offset laterally from the common axis, however, there is no means for support of the inner rings of the bearing. Thus, if the parts which support the inner ring are not in a condition to receive the inner ring, the axial separation between the inner ring of such a self-aligning bearing. In order to provide a suitable load carrying capability for the inner ring of such a self-aligning bearing is desirable the inner ring assembly having an inner ring which leads to a reduction in the useful life of the bearing. In order to provide a suitable load carrying capability for the inner ring which leads to a reduction in the useful life of the present invention to provide a self-aligning assembly having an inner ring which leads to a reduction in the useful life of the present invention to provide a self-aligning assembly having an inner ring which leads to a reduction in the useful life of the present invention to provi
