[steam page] [vimeo] [youtube] About Teapot games: They want to create games that people can enjoy casually! (more than absorbing games, less than intellectual games...) For now, one of their big projects is to create immersive VR experiences, and Antidote is their first VR game. They are currently working on several VR projects which will be announced on time! Here is their trailer: the risk of repeating myself, I wonder how much we should value the often heard, but seldom seen, advice to the new university student that it is important to "learn from other people's mistakes". The number of students who are foolish enough to pay large sums of money for being told things they already know is small, but the numbers of students who seem to find new acquaintances to sell them misinformation (or misinformation packaged as advice) is large. One of the most common methods of this is university careers service appointments, where students are shown a roomful of empty desks, told they will work for the careers service and then given a list of jobs they are expected to apply for. Apparently, they will be getting this information soon from the careers service at some point. One of the consequences of these appointments seems to be that students who meet at careers services, talk and then go off on a common quest to find work for someone else are able to work out how to make their jobs as difficult as possible without actually having to do any of the work. The result is that students who engage in this kind of thing are able to get through a few months in an unfulfilling job before they get the sack and blame the university for making them stand in a cold job centre for three years. I have also encountered staff in careers services who have a keen interest in convincing as many new students that they are an important part of the University's "future". On several occasions I have been told that I am welcome to join the staff of the University as a new staff member, and that it would be a good experience for me. These contacts usually end with them asking me to send them an official covering letter and a CV, and to telephone or e-

... In SteamWorld Heist, players assume the role of a pilot, mining robot or tank as they fight against a variety of mechanical enemies to discover the secrets of the heists, the robots, and the world of SteamWorld. Each character's class will have a set of weapons and modifications with which they will attempt to work to survive the dangers of the massive mining facility. The mini-map has been designed to be used with the main map, allowing players to see the world of SteamWorld in a whole new way! Numerous items can be acquired by performing missions or hacking terminals. Each item is useful in its own way, giving players the opportunity to customize their bots and robots for the best personal damage, support, or survivability. Innovative gameplay: ... Jupiter's Forge is a tactical rogue-like RPG that takes place in the same universe as Jupiter's Legacy. In the game, players step into the role of a tactical-warrior, tasked with liberating different sectors of the expansive Jupiter's Forge galaxy, using combat units (mechwarrior) and abilities (weapons) found in each sector. Players will be tasked with completing their journey by recruiting new mechwarriors from the existing roster of fighters and balancing them for optimal combat effectiveness. Jupiter's Forge is the spiritual successor to Jupiter's Legacy, a critically acclaimed tactical role-playing adventure game. In Jupiter's Legacy, players fought with mechwarriors and gained access to the entire Jupiter's Forge galaxy by completing missions. In Jupiter's Forge, those mechwarriors have become the basis for a new roster of characters and weapons. Players will have access to a roster of fighters, soldiers and mechwarriors as they progress through each of the sectors of the Jupiters' Forge galaxy. Completing missions and fighting in combat will gain experience for characters in order to unlock abilities and weapons for each mechwarrior. In 'The Briar Patch', players assume the role of an American or Japanese heavy tank attempting to battle through the Baja rainforest in the aftermath of World War II, during the Yalta Conference. Their mission is to create a safe path for their convoy by dismantling mines, ambushes, and enemy units. In Trenches, players will fight across the Western Front in the trenches of World War I. Questions of Life, the Universe, and Everything, with James P. Hogan, PhD Join James P. Hogan for the Deep Questions of Life, the Universe, and Everything as Hogan explores the most profound and essential questions about life. Someone tells you they know how to find you. They say, "I have a key and I know where you live. All I need is your name." And they present you with a very expensive key. The question is: Does your new key fit? As the story suggests, isn't good information free to anybody with a little bit of time and thought? But then, are there really any answers for the questions we spend our lives asking? [Note: The video above was originally filmed in September 2013.] This week we look at the 2011 Harvard study, "How people find their own names." ( The "vision audio" of the audio interview is free. The publisher (Rodale) gives away video and audio publishing rights for free online. They do this because online distribution of information creates more demand and profit. They're just following the laws of economics. But now with audio and video, the readers of the site are largely customers at R.E.A.L. or aren't interested in investing their time and money into seeing the video. Even so, because of free audio and video, they're spread all over the world, so we're in business with thousands of new subscribers-all the time-who can't see or afford the video. Those who can afford to sit through the video will discover this problem of the present that the Harvard Study found: "Of the people most likely to search for a personal name in IMDB, only 30 percent search for it on Rotten Tomatoes." That surprised me, but what's most surprising, to me, is that "15% of those people who search for a name on IMDB will also search on Rotten Tomatoes." I guess you have to have access to both information databases to do that. My assumption is that maybe, just maybe, Rotten Tomatoes has an index of which movies are popular, what critics liked, and so on.
